

The Church occupies the central place of the project, as much in its physical as in the spiritual sense, and its presence stands out above the walls which structure the intervention. The campus is incorporated into the project by introducing it between the walls and creating free walk areas, although in a certain sense directed, by means of a single space characterised in different ways (on occasions it is introverted, on others it opens out towards the campus, sometimes opening northwards, other times towards the south...). The church, is understood as a box supported by two walls, and because it avoids contact with the ground, allows the external environment to enter and form part of the internal one. Light is introduced into the large nave in a sloping fashion, blended and reflected on two sheets of water. The murmur of the water contributes to the atmosphere of tranquillity and peace which has inspired the name of the project.

PACEM IN TERRIS

La Iglesia ocupa el lugar central del proyecto, tanto en su sentido físico como en el espiritual, y su presencia se destaca por encima de los muros que estructuran la intervención.

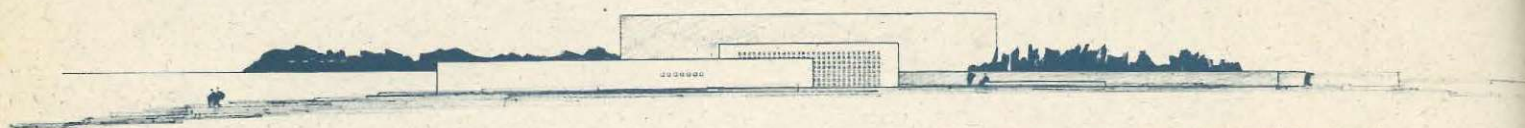

El campus se incorpora al proyecto introduciéndose entre los muros y creando recorridos libres a través de un único espacio caracterizado de distintos modos (en ocasiones es introvertido, en otras se abre hacia el campus; unas veces mira hacia el Norte, otras mira hacia el Sur...).

La Iglesia se entiende como una caja apoyada sobre dos muros y que, al evitar el contacto con el terreno, permite al ambiente exterior entrar a formar parte del interior. La luz se introduce en la gran nave de manera rasante, muy matizada, reflejada por dos láminas de agua. El murmullo del agua contribuye al clima de quietud y de paz que ha inspirado el nombre del proyecto.
